

The Daily Courant.

Wednesday July 15. 1719.

London, July 15.

Yesterday arrived the Mail from France of yesterday last.

From the Paris Gazette, dated July 25.

Paris, July 22.

MADAME Mary Louise Elizabeth of Orleans, Duchess of Berry, died the Night between the 20th and 21st Instant at la Muette. On the 18th she received the Sacrament, and the extreme Unction, which were administered to her by the Abbot de Castres, her first Almoner, nominated to the Arch-bishoprick of Tours, who was assisted by the Curé de Passy. The Duke of Orleans, accompanied by the Duke of Chartres, and several Lords, went before the Sacrament, and accompanied it back as far as the Parish Church of Passy. The Almoners of the Duchess, the Officers of Her Household, and her Pages, each holding a wax Taper, assisted at that Ceremony, during which, that Princess gave Marks of great Piety, and an entire Submission to the Will of God, continuing in those Sentiments to the last Moment of her Life. She was born the 20th of August, 1695, and was married the 6th of July, 1710, to Charles of France, Duke of Berry, who died the 4th of May, 1714.

Paris, July 22. The Duchess of Berry having been given over by the Physicians of the Court, and of this City, the Medicines prescribed by a Professor from Metzopolis were applied, by which she found some Relief since Wednesday last; but on the 20th at 9 in the Evening, she fell into an Agony, and expired that Night between 12 and 1. The careful Concern the Regent her Father expressed for her Life during those Days past, and the utmost Grief he is under after her Death, are every way answerable to that Tenderness with which he loved a Princess, who had so much good Understanding, that her House was always an agreeable Retreat to him from Business, where it was a most delightful Amusement for the Company to observe, that the Manner in which that Princess entertained her Father, seldom failed to please him. Madame the Duchess Dowager of Orleans, the Duke of Chartres, and Mademoiselle, are under no less Affliction for the Loss of that Princess. Her Corpse was, as is customary with Persons of her Rank, immediately upon her Death to be carried to the Palace of Luxembourg, to lie there in State with the usual Ceremonies, till every thing should be prepared for the solemn Funeral Procession, in which it was to be transported to the Royal Tombs at St. Denys; but the Regent declared, that it was his Intention those Ceremonies should be avoided, and it was resolved that her Heart should be interred to Night at the Abbey of Val-de-grace, and the Corpse carried to Morrow to the Royal Abbey at St. Denys, where it will be exposed to publick View for 40 Days, during which Time, the Officers of the Princess's Household are to attend in the same Manner as in her Life time; after which, the solemn Funeral Service is to be performed.
